Staying Positive

My perspective on religion, family, and education hasn’t changed at all. It has been the same for a long time. I like it that way because I’m happy and my family is happy. Nothing has changed for my family and me. It has been the same for many years and hopefully it will stay like that.

My perspective on my religion hasn’t changed because I am really strong about it. I pray five times every day. It can be hard at some times, but you get used to it later on in your life. I read the Quran, which is really informative, and it has good stories of all the prophets. It tells you what they went through in life; how they were picked to be the chosen ones, I guess you could call them that. But the thing was that in a way they were all related by blood. We also read some hadith, which are famous quotes from the close friends of the Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him). I also learned some new things from the Muslim scholars. They are people who learn the religion and preach it to other people. Also, there are people who read the Quran and know all about the meaning of it, so they preach it to other people. Some of them teach you how to read it. Just by doing all of these things, it makes our belief stronger.

My family hasn’t changed much either. The only thing that changed was the amount of family members that got added. Overall, everything is still the same as it was a long time ago. I am starting to learn more and more about my parents, family, grandparents, etc. The stories that they tell me are really interesting. My relatives are really nice and none of them are mean in any kind of. They are always happy to see them too. We do a lot of activities together and I am really close with all of them. My perspective on them is that none of them are bad, but all of them are good. I have never faced any kind of challenges with my family. Whatever we do, we all face it... together by talking about it. No matter what problems we have, we always find a way through those situations. We do it with love and support. We all really love each other, nothing and no one will ever change that.

The perspective on my education has seemed to grow more and more every year. The reason why is because every year in school, in the community, and in other places I tend to visit, I learn something every day. I also enjoy searching for information on the internet, which has also given me a more enjoyable perspective on education. I often watch the news, so I can stay informed on what is going on in the world around me. It is really important to watch the news because you earn a lot of knowledge about what is going on around you, and in other places around the world. Another good source for gaining knowledge is the newspaper. One day, I would like to go to a retirement home and learn something about the people there, about what their lives were like and what the community was like in their time. You could challenge your knowledge by going to a game show or by watching one just to see how smart you are. You can also learn a lot by joining the army. One very valuable piece of knowledge that people can learn are the mistakes that people made in history, so they don’t repeat on the mistakes of those people. They can learn the art of self-defense and can learn new strategies of attacking. There are many other places where you can find knowledge. The whole world is your school. You can learn anything from anyone.

Those are the perspectives of my religion, my family, and my education. Someone will always be there for you to guide you, support you, and educate you. I know for sure that my perspectives for these ideas won’t stay the same forever, but they will grow bigger throughout the years. I will gain more knowledge, become stronger in faith towards my religion, and have a better family who will eventually grow even bigger later on. What I am trying to say here is that you should stay positive to your perspective.
